

Not Wanted

LOGLINE: After a well-off teenager's grandma dies, she has trouble finding other people who value her as a person instead of valuing her wealth.

Synopsis:

Mia is a sixteen-year-old girl raised in Fayetteville, Arkansas with extremely wealthy parents. When she is abruptly checked out from school, Mia learns that her grandma has unexpectedly died.

Following Mia's return to school on Tuesday, she tells her boyfriend the news in which he comforts her. However, after overhearing his conversation with another girl Mia realizes that her boyfriend is only dating her for her money.

Outraged Mia decides to change her lifestyle. She tosses out everything that may signify her as a wealthy individual and even goes to the extent of driving her mom's first car she's kept over all these years.

As she drives out of the parking lot for off campus lunch in hopes to avoid confrontation from her boyfriend, Mia accidentally hits Charlie. Her old best friend.

When Mia and Charlie decide to eat lunch together, Mia becomes aware that her plan has backfired. Charlie loves her new outfit and the vintage car aesthetic. Furthermore, Mia discovers that Charlie is only eating lunch with her to take pictures of the "cool" car and treat her as a psychology patient.

After reaching her breaking point, Mia yells at Charlie and expresses how she feels. To her surprise Charlie does not seem taken aback.

Instead Charlie takes her to her house. She shows Mia her bedroom filled with photographs and explains that the next photography competition she is entering has an 80s theme. She's not a typical materialistic teenager obsessed with cars.

In fact, Charlie takes it one step further and tells Mia that she is also secretly wealthy. The reason Charlie has distanced herself from Mia all these years is not because she doesn't want her in her life. It's because she thought Mia wanted a rich friend to like her.

Charlie walks to the wall behind her bed and points to a picture in the center. She tells Mia that the first photo she ever won in a competition was this photo. It's an action photo of Mia's grandma knitting.

Filled with unconscious emotions surfacing, Mia is at a loss of words. Charlie does exactly what Mia needs at the moment. She hands Mia the photo for her to keep.